To whom it may concern:

Tarek Fahmy was my student in the Graduate Communications Design program at Pratt Institute in 2008 and 2009.

Mr. Fahmy was always curious to learn new perspectives and to do the extra work needed to achieve superior results. When working on course projects, he went beyond the requirements of the assignment to do additional investigations, sketches and iterations.

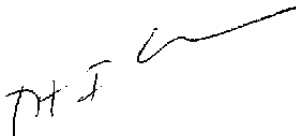

In addition to his considerable technical and design skills, he regularly drew upon his knowledge of other topics acquired through reading, travel and commercial experience.

During the process of creating his thesis on stereotypes, data and surveillance, Tarek wrote a thorough and compelling document.

To summarize, Tarek Fahmy is a convivial and engaged designer/thinker with considerable skills and a lot to offer to any challenging engagement.

If you have any further questions about Tarek Fahmy, please feel free to call me at 917-806-7460.

Sincerely,

To Whom It May Concern:

Re: Mr Tarek Fahmy

Mr Fahmy was awarded The Master of Science (Communication Design) degree in Spring of 2009. He was an excellent student in my Visual Communication classes.

His work consistently demonstrated a high level of creative problem solving and well executed original projects. We found Mr Fahmy to be a talented, serious, conscientious student, active in Department activities and well liked by fellow students and faculty.

Tarek is a multi-talented designer. He is fluent in three languages. His capabilities include extended, up to date technical skills, original creative problem solving concepts, as well as traditional drawing and illustration skills. His Thesis Project is an outstanding example of a well researched and seriously considered project.

Mr Fahmy is able to work extraordinarily well as a team member and his obvious devotion to excellence in design will make him a valued part of whatever creative organization he will join.

Sincerely,

Chava Ben-Amos
